

BELOVED LADY LAID TO REST

Mrs. W. T. Moore Passes
On Saturday After
Long Illness

Last rites for Sallie Cunningham Moore, 50, wife of W. T. Moore, were held at the Franklin Methodist church on Easter afternoon, where hundreds of sorrowing friends gathered to pay their last tribute to one of Macon's most beloved women. She died early Saturday morning after a long illness. The pastor, Rev. W. Jackson Huncyett was assisted in the service by Revs. J. F. Marchman, A. R. Morgan and Dr. J. T. Gillespie. Burial was in Franklin cemetery.

Pallbearers were T. W. Angel, T. D. Bryson, Henry W. Cabe, James Hauser, Lyman Higdon, Guy L. Houk, Herbert McGlavery, and Richard S. O'Mohundro. Members of the Eastern Star, which organization she had served in a number of chapter offices, attended in a body and had charge of the profusion of beautiful floral tributes.

Mrs. Moore grew up in Franklin, beloved by all who knew her for her devotion to her family, friends and to every good cause in her community. She was active in her church, being a member of the Bible class and choir. She was married to William T. Moore on December 30, 1914.

For 25 years she had been connected with her father's firm of E. K. Cunningham and Co., taking over the management of the business after his death in 1931. This she directed with marked success, assisted by her husband, up to a short time before her death.

Surviving are her husband, her mother, three brothers, J. K. of Beckley, W. Va., Charles E. of Compton, Calif., and Roy F. of Franklin; a sister, Mrs. Carl Tysinger of Franklin; a half brother, W. C. Cunningham and a half-sister, Mrs. Ida Presta, of Lawndale, Calif.
